A. INTRODUCTION

According to the Financial Services Authority (OJK) financial literacy is a series of processes or activities to increase the knowledge, confidence, and skills of consumers and the wider community, so that they can manage finances better (OJK, 2014). The importance of financial literacy so that low knowledge of the financial industry can be overcome and the public is not easily fooled into investment products that offer high returns in the short term without considering the risk (Khatimah, 2019).

Financial literacy is one of the most important indicators in increasing public knowledge. With the existence of financial literacy in the community, it will be easy for people to understand financial products and services so that they can make good and correct decisions in managing finances to meet their needs (Tulasmi, 2020). Therefore, to improve Islamic financial literacy, a strategy is needed from every financial service business actor to increase Islamic financial literacy and inclusion so that Islamic financial products and services are known and used by the public. One of the strategies is to provide education and socialization about Islamic financial services so that the public can increase knowledge about Islamic finance. From the results of the third national financial literacy and inclusion survey (SNLIK) conducted by the Financial Services Authority (OJK) in 2019, the financial literacy index reached 38.03% and the financial inclusion index 76.19%. This figure is an increase compared to the results of the 2016 OJK survey, namely the financial literacy index of 29.7% and the financial inclusion index of 67.8%. Thus, in the last 3 years there has been an increase in public financial understanding (literacy) by 8.33%, and an increase in access to financial products and services (financial inclusion) by 8.39%. (OJK, 2020).

Efforts made by OJK in improving Islamic financial literacy are by issuing Financial Services Authority Circular Letter Number 30/SEOJK.07/2017 regarding the implementation of education to improve financial literacy to consumers and/or the public. The implementation of this education must be carried out by PUJK (financial service business actors) to consumers or the public as an annual program. These activities are supervised and registered by the OJK, business actors must carry out these activities, namely conventional and sharia (OJK, 2017).

One of the other financial institutions outside of banking that has a clear public mission. Its operational system uses Islamic sharia, only its products and management are slightly different from the banking industry, which seeks to alleviate poverty is Baitul Maal wa Tamwil (BMT). BMT is a financial institution that was grown from the role of the wider community, there are no economic, social, or even religious boundaries. All components of society can play an active role in building a financial system that is fairer and more importantly able to reach even the smallest layers of entrepreneurs (Ridwan, 2004).

BMT has a role to improve financial literacy in the community. The existence of BMT in society is highly expected. Especially for the lower middle class who do not understand Islamic financial institutions. Under these circumstances, at least the existence of BMTs has several roles, namely, 1) keeping people away from non-sharia economic practices. By actively conducting socialization in the community about the importance of the Islamic economic system. 2) Conducting coaching and funding of small businesses. BMT must be active in carrying out its function as a microfinance institution, for example by way of mentoring, coaching, counseling, and supervising the businesses of customers or the general public. 3) Letting go of dependence on moneylenders, people are still dependent on moneylenders because moneylenders can fulfill people's desires to fulfill funds immediately. So BMT must be able to serve the community better, for example, always available funds at all times, simple bureaucracy, and so on. 4) Maintaining the economic justice of the community with an even distribution. The function of BMT directly dealing with complex society is required to be smart in attitude, therefore steps to conduct evaluations in the context of mapping a priority scale that must be considered, for example in financing issues, BMT must pay attention to the feasibility of customers in terms of customer groups and types of financing (Khatimah, 2019). According to Sudarsono, there are several roles of BMT, namely keeping people away from non-sharia economic practices, providing guidance and funding for small businesses, releasing dependence on moneylenders, and maintaining community economic justice with equitable distribution. One way to do literacy (Sudarsono, 2003).

One of the BMTs that do financing and is present in the community is BMT Almabruk. BMT Almabruk is a BMT located within the IAIN Batusangkar campus and is located quite strategically. BMT Almabruk has several products including:

Source: (report on the number of customers of BMT Almabruk in 2021)

Based on table 1.1, it can be seen that the number of customers who save at BMT Almabruk has increased every year from 2018-2020, one type of savings offered at BMT Almabruk is wadi'ah savings which consists of general wadi'ah savings and student wadi’ah savings. Based on the table above, it can be seen from the increasing number of customers until 2020.

Besides that, the author has also observed that BMT almabruk does literacy through apprentice students to introduce BMT almabruk to the community, by visiting schools, offices, supermarkets, and small stalls. This literacy is carried out to introduce the products and financing offered by BMT Almabruk which are based on sharia. From the results of this observation, there are still many who do not know about Islamic microfinance institutions, one of which is BMT. They still think that Islamic financial institutions are still the same as conventional financial institutions. In fact, this almabruk BMT is located around schools, offices, supermarkets, and small stalls. This shows that there are still many people who still transact at conventional banks and there are still many people who do not understand and lack knowledge about Islamic financial institutions. The reasons are various, some say it's easier, and they don't know what BMT is. This lack of understanding of customers and prospective customers about Islamic finance shows that financial literacy carried out by financial institutions in Tanah Datar is still low, especially for people who are within the reach of BMT Almabruk transactions.

This is different from the research conducted by Indra Kusuma Dewi and Safaah Restuning Hayati, "The Strategy of Islamic Banks in Improving Islamic Financial Literacy in the Community (Case Study at BPRS Madina Mandiri Sejahtera)", in which the results of the research show that the level of Islamic financial literacy in the community 82.42% of those who received education programs from BPRS Madina Mandiri Sejahtera was recorded in the high category. While the strategy of BPRS Madina Mandiri Sejahtera in increasing Islamic financial literacy in the community can be implemented with several programs, namely: first, socialization and education to the public, second, education through mass media, and third, people who come directly to the office and BPRS Madina Mandiri Sejahtera's overall education program has been carried out by OJK Circular Letter No.1/SEOJK.07/2014 which is based on the principles of inclusiveness, systematic and measurable, then access, and collaboration.

For this reason, the role of BMT is very necessary for terms of providing guidance, increasing financial literacy, and providing funding based on the sharia system. This role emphasizes the importance of sharia principles in the economic life of the community. As a sharia financial institution that is in direct contact with the lives of small people who have sufficient knowledge or materials. So BMT has an important task in carrying out Islamic missions in all aspects of people's lives.

This is because there is a perception from the public that the products and services in Islamic banking are the same as conventional banking. The interest and profit sharing offered are also the same, the only difference being the name. That's a phenomenon that the author encountered around the community where the author conducts research. It is very concerning considering that Muslims prefer to transact in conventional institutions even though there are already Islamic financial institutions. This shows that the level of financial literacy in the community is still very low. This is dominated by the lack of socialization and education as well as guidance to the wider community.

In accordance with the background of the research previously stated above, the authors are interested in conducting research with the title "Principles of Implementing Financial Literacy at BMT Almabruk Batusangkar based on SEOJK Number 30/SEOJK.07/2017"
B. LITERATURE REVIEW

1. Islamic Financial Literacy

Financial literacy is the level of knowledge, skills, and public confidence regarding financial institutions and their products and services as outlined in the index size parameters (OJK, 2014). OJK Regulation, Number 76/POJK.07/2016 states that financial literacy is knowledge, skills, and beliefs, which influence attitudes and behavior to improve the quality of decision-making and financial management to achieve prosperity (Fatira, 2019).

According to the Indonesian Financial Literacy National Strategy, financial literacy is a series of processes or activities to increase the knowledge, confidence, and skills of consumers and the wider community so that they can manage finances better (SNLKI, 2013). There are 5 (five) financial literacy indicators:

a) Financial knowledge: knowledge of Islamic financial institutions that provide financial services, financing products, and formal services, knowing the rights and obligations of customers, and knowing how to obtain financing and savings products.

b) Financial skills: the community's ability to calculate the level of margin (profit sharing) financing, inflation, and investment profit sharing (return).

c) Financial Confidence: reasons for public financial confidence in financial institutions, both formal financial institutions, and non-formal financial institutions.

d) Financial behavior: having a goal of using financial products and services, to achieve goals by saving and having a good financial plan.

Islamic financial literacy reflects a person's knowledge and cognitive abilities regarding finance. Financial literacy ability can be defined as the ability to use financial knowledge possessed to make decisions and describe the ability to recognize and apply concepts relevant to finance.

Financial literacy is the ability to manage finances to improve welfare which is influenced by factors from within the individual such as cognitive and psychological abilities as well as factors outside the individual such as socioeconomic conditions. Islamic financial literacy must refer to Islamic sharia, which is based on Islamic law (Fatira, 2019).

2. Principles of Literacy Implementation based on SE OJK Number 30/SEOJK.07/2014

The implementation of activities to improve Financial Literacy is prepared by the PUJK as an annual program carried out at least 1 (one) time in 1 (one) a year:

a) The implementation of activities in order to improve Financial Literacy is carried out based on the following principles:

i) Planned and Measurable, the application of this principle is realized through the implementation of activities with concepts that are by the targets, strategies, authority policies, and policies of PUJK and based on certain indicators to obtain information on improving Financial Literacy.

ii) Oriented to Achievement, the application of this principle is realized through activities to achieve the goal of improving Financial Literacy by optimizing existing resources.

iii) Sustainable, the application of this principle is realized through the implementation of activities carried out on an ongoing basis to achieve the planned goals and has a long-term aspect of understanding Consumers and/or the public regarding financial management, institutions, financial products, and/or services.

iv) Collaboration, the application of this principle is realized through the involvement of various stakeholders in the implementation of activities together by taking into account the role of each PUJK.

2. Baitul Mal wa Tamwil

Baitul maal wattamwil (BMT) consists of two terms, namely baitul maal and baitul tamwil. Baitul Maal is more focused on collecting and distributing non-profit funds, such as zakat, infaq, and shadaqoh. Meanwhile, Baitul Tamwil is an effort to collect funds for the distribution of commercial funds. These efforts are an integral part of BMT as an institution that supports the economic activities of small communities based on sharia.

BMT (integrated independent business center) is a people's economic business institution that can and can serve small-scale business customers based on a profit-sharing and buying and selling system by utilizing the potential of guarantees in their environment (Iska, 2005).

There are several roles of BMT for financial literacy:

a) The role of BMT in poverty alleviation

One of the causes of poverty is the lack of understanding of the community in using income and financial resources, so it tends to be consumptive and without a plan. Without a good and correct plan and utilization, the existing income and assets can only be utilized in the short term and will run out. Planning and understanding the function of money and assets/wealth is closely related to the level of financial literacy. If the level of financial literacy is poor, then people tend not to understand how to use and utilize money.

The low level of literacy is experienced by the poor, with low education, and those who have not interacted with formal financial institutions. BMT which is the object of research has a role in providing understanding and awareness to the community to reduce poverty. The effort is to invite the community to use the available abilities and opportunities to do business even though it is done from home, especially for housewives. For example, by encouraging people to open home-based businesses such as grocery stalls, food stalls, and so on.

In addition, the strategic role of BMT in reducing poverty has been carried out through BMT's economic activities related to social activities (baitul maal) and business activities (at-tamwil). BMT's socio-economic activities are carried out through zakat, infaq, alms, and waqf movements. This is the advantage of BMT in reducing poverty.

b) The role of BMT in economic empowerment

There are BMTs that empower their members through social interaction, namely through the taklim assembly or other groups in the distribution of their financing. So far, BMT has not been optimal in providing an understanding of its members with proper muamalah education through the taklim assembly group. Through groups like this, a stronger desire will be developed in the community to be empowered and fight for their economy in a better direction.

c) The role of the sociological approach of BMT in improving financial literacy.

In the sociological approach to religion. It can be explained that one of the things that motivate people to be involved in an activity is because they want to get security in terms of certainty and conformity with their religious law to support their activities. In theory, if a person is Muslim, then automatically that person's behavior in choosing to finance will be based on the teachings of his religion, that is, he will not choose a form of financing whose return system is based on the usury system.

As a financial institution that is close to the community, BMT has a strategic role to overcome the problems of people who have not been able to take advantage of financial products at commercial banks. Before providing services, both savings and financing to the community, the BMT approached through visits to the community to socialize the concept of simple financial management. The meeting also introduced the concept of saving and the benefits of long-term financial management. This is part of an effort to increase public understanding (literacy) regarding the use and orientation of the use of money. Thus, after becoming a member of the BMT, the community is more understanding and wise in managing their finances (Khatimah, 2019).
